

RASHAD'S STORY

Rashad Jones-Jennings, also known as "Shadzilla", was born and raised in a small town in Chattanooga, Tennessee. From a young age, he learned about the harsh realities of life, gaining a firsthand understanding of the longstanding socio-economic disparities that his community grapples with. From a tender age, he observed how the absence of homeownership opportunities, quality education, and job prospects made a significant impact on his community.

Regardless of his circumstances, Rashad was determined to write a different narrative for his life. Due to his outstanding academic achievements, he received an academic scholarship to pursue his college education. Then, he joined the university's basketball team as a walk-on player, and soon after, he was awarded an athletic scholarship by the start of the season which led him to become a part of the All-American Team.

With his unrelenting passion for sports, he made a name in the world of professional basketball. Over the course of eight years, he played for a host of teams throughout Europe, South America, and Asia. In 2015, he made the unexpected decision to retire from basketball due to injury; however, his journey to success was still far from over. In preparation for his transition to real estate, he immersed himself in real estate books and equipped himself with the knowledge needed to succeed in the industry.

With his perseverance, he obtained licenses as a real estate agent in both Georgia and Tennessee and eventually obtained his broker's license. Fulfilling his lifelong dream of becoming a Real Estate Developer, he decided to shift his focus toward developing communities.
